AAIMHI's response to Australian Marriage Law Survey

28th October 2017

As an organisation, AAIMHI's mission is to advocate in the best interests of infants. Evidence shows that infants and very young children are best served within consistent, supportive and loving relationships in a fair and equal society. Legislative inequality has a significant and deleterious impact on mental health which in turn can impact on the parent/infant relationship.

AAIMHI acknowledges diversity of ways to raise children in different family constellations. All infants should have equal rights. The current Australian Marriage Law means that not all infants have equal rights.

For this reason, AAIMHI supports the 'yes' campaign for marriage equality in all relationships.
