Australian Association of Infant Mental Health
Northern Territory Branch presents:

A webinar with Joe Coyne....

“Infancy as the ground from which the Self grows.”

A discussion of contemporary development theory and psychodynamic ideas on the self and how it is shaped by early procedural experiences in the first years of life

 Date: 22nd July 2025

 Time: 8:00 PM (AEST)

 Location: Online via Microsoft Teams

 Cost: Free

About the presenter:

Joe Coyne has worked for 30 years as an applied developmental psychologist in the area of child and family psychology and adult psychotherapy since graduating from a Master of Clinical Psychology. He has been specifically interested in developmental processes that lead to healthy outcomes, particularly the impacts of parenting and early life events on personal trajectories. Since the early 2000's he has been exploring the benefits of incorporating attachment theory and research into contemporary treatment approaches for parents, children, and adults. He currently works as a consultant and trainer for Circle of Security International and in private practice.
